

UCU COLLEGE OF TEACHER EDUCATION ADVANCES SDG 4 THROUGH SEMINAR ON EMPOWERING THE TEACHING PROFESSION 4.0

In support of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal 4 (Quality Education) and Urdaneta City University's mission to uphold academic excellence, the College of Teacher Education (CTE) successfully conducted a seminar themed "Empowering Education Through the Teaching Profession 4.0: Elevating Excellence in a Gender-Responsive Environment."

The program, open to all interested faculty members and students, aimed to strengthen the University's pursuit of high-quality, inclusive, and equitable education by equipping current and future educators with the skills and insights needed in the rapidly evolving educational landscape.

Renowned educator Dr. Brenda B. Corpuz, President of the Philippine Association for Teachers and Educators (PAFTE), served as the keynote speaker. Her inspiring address shed light on the transformative power of technology, gender responsiveness, and innovative teaching strategies in shaping 21st-century learning.

This collaborative effort, led by CTE Dean Dr. Ryan Jayson Delos Reyes and the dedicated faculty members, exemplified UCU's commitment to providing continuous professional development opportunities that align with both institutional and global education goals.

Through engaging discussions, knowledge sharing, and networking, participants were empowered to elevate teaching standards and contribute to the advancement of SDG 4—ensuring inclusive and quality education and promoting lifelong learning opportunities for all.

The UCU College of Teacher Education remains steadfast in its mission to empower educators and learners alike, fostering a culture of innovation, collaboration, and excellence in support of sustainable educational development.
